Road safety in the UK

135,480 people were injured in collisions on Great Britain's roads in 2022. Of those, more than 28,000 were seriously injured and 1,711 people died.

A third of road deaths occurred whilst travelling for work.

In 2020 the pandemic caused a drop in road casualties through lower road use. Progress in reducing casualties has slowed down and the challenge facing Road Safety GB and other stakeholders is to reverse that trend.

Road Safety GB

A limited company with charitable status, Road Safety GB is a leading road safety organisation in the UK with growing links internationally.

Road Safety GB supports the work of road safety professionals both in local government and the private sector. It helps practitioners to develop their knowledge and skill to enable them to deliver professional and effective road safety interventions.

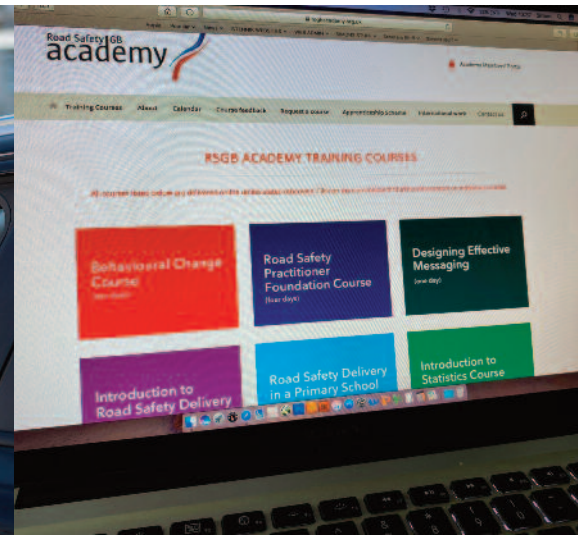

A team of very experienced and highly skilled road safety professionals from local government manages the organisation, and with the support of eminent consultants from the private sector, and a team of specialist advisers covering a wide range of road safety disciplines, provide high quality education, training and information.

Road Safety GB Academy

The Road Safety GB Academy is the organisation's training arm, which is supported and endorsed by the Department for Transport (DfT).

Membership of the Academy is open to individuals from both the public and private sector that are professionally involved in road safety. The Academy is a fast developing area of the organisation and a number of courses are available to help upskill the nation's road safety practitioners and provide them with the latest information and techniques to combat road casualties.

Road Safety GB Membership

Local Authority Membership is available to local authority road safety teams across England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.
